CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS xi
ABOUT THE EDITORS AND CONTRIBUTORS xiii
SERIES EDITORS' FOREWORD xxii
INTRODUCTION xxiii

PART I
WINNICOTT: HIS WORK AND LEGACY

SECTION INTRODUCTION 3

CHAPTER ONE
Has Winnicott become a Winnicottian? 7
Martin James

CHAPTER TWO
Winnicott’s constant search for the life that feels real 19
James William Anderson
CHAPTER THREE
“People who think in pictures”: the continuing dialogue between Marion Milner and Donald Winnicott in Bothered by Alligators 39
Emma Letley

CHAPTER FOUR
Unassimilated aggression and the emergence of the unit self: Winnicott, Jung, and Matte Blanco 47
William Meredith-Owen

CHAPTER FIVE
Winnicott and Bion: claiming alternate legacies 61
R. D. Hinshelwood

CHAPTER SIX
Winnicott’s anni horribiles: the biographical roots of “Hate in the counter-transference” 69
Brett Kahr

CHAPTER SEVEN
Between Winnicott and Lacan 85
Lewis A. Kirshner

CHAPTER EIGHT
A measure of agreement: an exploration of the relationship of Winnicott and Phyllis Greenacre 97
Nellie L. Thompson

PART II
CLINICAL WORK AND APPLICATIONS OF WINNICOTT’S TRADITION

SECTION INTRODUCTION 117

CHAPTER NINE
On potential space 121
Thomas H. Ogden

CHAPTER TEN
Creating connections 135
Dilys Dawes
CHAPTER ELEVEN
The paternal function in Winnicott: the psychoanalytical frame, becoming human
Haydee Faimberg

CHAPTER TWELVE
"Where we start from": thinking with Winnicott and Lacan about the care of homeless adults
Deborah Anna Lucpinitz

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
Seeing and being seen: the psychodynamics of pornography through the lens of Winnicott’s thought
John Woods

CHAPTER FOURTEEN
The isolate and the stranger: Winnicott’s model of subjectivity and its implications for theory and technique
James Rose

CHAPTER FIFTEEN
Hatred and helping: working with our own fear and narcissistic rage
Peter Wilson

CHAPTER SIXTEEN
“I feel that you are introducing a big problem. I never became human. I have missed it”
Lesley Caldwell

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN
The analyst’s oscillating between interpreting and not interpreting: a peculiar Winnicottian point of view on interpreting and not interpreting
Vincenzo Bonaminio

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
Maternal perinatal mental illness: the baby’s unexperienced breakdown
Angela Joyce

CHAPTER NINETEEN
Mind the gap: dysynchrony in the writings of Winnicott and associated clinical thoughts
Alexandra M. Harrison
PART III
SPECIALISED WORK IN THE WINNICOTT TRADITION

SECTION INTRODUCTION 255

CHAPTER TWENTY
The importance of being seen: Winnicott, dance movement psychotherapy, and the embodied experience 259
Suzi Tortora

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE
The location of authenticity 273
Graham Lee

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO
Transitional/transitive—pictures from an exhibition 291
Ann Murphy

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE
The seriousness of playfulness 299
Campbell Paul

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
Maternal form in artistic creation 305
Kenneth Wright

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE
Ways of being: transitional objects and the work of art 315
Elizabeth Presa

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX
Unintegrated states and the process of integration: a new formulation 327
Christopher Reeves

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN
The reflected self 341
Louise K. Newman

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT
“Oedipus, schmedipus: so long as he loves his mother”: teaching Winnicott to a non-analytic audience 355
Bernard Barnett
PART IV
PERSONAL AND THEORETICAL
REFLECTIONS FROM CLINICIANS

SECTION INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE
Two pioneers in the history of infant mental health: Winnicott and Bowlby
Eric Räumer

CHAPTER THIRTY
Winnicott’s influence on paediatrics then and now
Ann Morgan and Robin Wilson

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE
Anna Freud and Winnicott: developmental stages, aggression,
and infantile sexuality
Elisabeth Young-Bruehl

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO
A personal reflection: claiming alternate legacies
Jennifer Johns

INDEX